Experience, enjoy and discover the Derwent Valley

Take a journey back to an age when Britain held centre - stage as the world's first industrial nation - to a place where water power was first successfully harnessed for textile production - a milestone in the Industrial Revolution.

Amid breathtaking countryside in the heart of rural Derbyshire, and offering fascinating insights into industrial and social life during the 18th and 19th centuries, the Derwent Valley Mills World Heritage Site is the perfect choice for a summer outing or a winter break.

Snaking 15 miles down the river valley from Matlock Bath to Derby, the World Heritage Site contains a fascinating series of historic mill complexes, including some of the world's first 'modern' factories. No less important are the watercourses that powered them, the settlements that were built for the mill workers, and the remains of one of the world's earliest railways - all nestling within a stunningly beautiful landscape that has changed little over two centuries.

Here too, you can enjoy a range of country walks, quality shopping, wholesome food and drink, and abundant local hospitality. There is something for everyone!

Come and see for yourself why this part of Derbyshire has been designated a World Heritage Site.

Visitors travelling by train can benefit from discounts on mill tours at Sir Richard Arkwright's Masson Mills and on Cromford Canal narrow boat cruises, on production of their train ticket. Download the discount vouchers from www.eastmidlandstrains.co.uk/derwentvalleyline

Cromford Canal

Sir Richard Arkwright's magnificent Masson Mills at Matlock Bath stand at the northern entrance to the World Heritage Site. Established in 1783, and in continuous use until 1991, the mills house a remarkable working textile museum and an adjoining retail village. Experience the sights, sounds and smells of a bygone age: the clatter of well-oiled machinery, the whirr of drive belts and wooden floors worn by generations of local millworkers' feet.

A short distance south of Masson Mills lies Arkwright's Cromford Mill of 1771, the world's first successful water-powered cotton spinning mill. The complex was saved from dereliction in the 1970s and now houses a new visitor centre, specialist shops, restaurants, business units and exhibitions.

As he harnessed water power to move the cotton industry out of homes and into purpose-built factories, Arkwright provided for the needs of his new workforce. Today much of Cromford - the village he created and which remained in his family's ownership until the 1920s - remains intact. See the cottages built for workers' families, the school, the inn, the lock-up for those who misbehaved, even the privies, allotments and pigsties that formed the backdrop to factory workers' lives.

Before leaving Cromford, be sure to call into the magnificent St Mary's Church and the Arkwright's family home of Willersley Castle, and take a stroll along the Cromford Canal to the High Peak Junction Workshops. From Cromford, make a brief diversion to the factory shop at John Smedley's Mill before travelling southwards to Belper.

Derby Silk Mill

Standing at the northern entrance to Belper is the Strutt's North Mill (1804). Visitors to its museum can explore the story of how Jedediah Strutt helped introduce mechanised cotton spinning to the Derwent Valley and transformed Belper into the world's first cotton mill town.

Once inside, see how the North Mill's pioneering fire-proof technology inspired the construction of skyscrapers, and discover the impact of the factory system on ordinary people's lives. The museum also tells the story of how Belper's Samuel Slater became 'Father of the American Industrial Revolution'. Strutt's North Mill also houses the Derwent Valley Visitor Centre, where you can find tourist information, gift shop and light refreshments. Before leaving Belper, take a moment to admire the remarkable horseshoe weir and discover the beautiful River Gardens.

Following the river downstream through the historic mill village of Millford, you will arrive at the community of Darley Abbey. Here water power was already in use driving paper, corn, flint and leather mills when, in 1782, the Evans family added their cotton mills and later their factory village.

A walk through Darley Park brings you to Derby Silk Mill, the southern entrance to the World Heritage Site. Currently undergoing a redevelopment programme, the museum opens regularly for events and activities. Derby Museum and Art Gallery boasts the largest collection of Joseph Wright paintings and drawings plus temporary exhibitions and displays celebrating natural history, archaeology, military history, ceramics and more.
