HEALTH AND WELLBEING BOARD ROUND-UP REPORT

1. Purpose of the report

To provide the Board with a round-up of key progress in relation to Health and Wellbeing issues and projects not covered elsewhere on the agenda.

2. Round-Up

Are we listening? A review of children and young people's mental health services

The Care Quality Commission has published a report which describes the findings of an independent review of the system of services that support children and young people's mental health. The report draws on evidence gathered from fieldwork in 10 health and wellbeing board areas in England and finds that too many children and young people reach 'crisis point' before accessing mental health services.

Reducing emergency admissions

The National Audit Office has published a report which examines progress that the Department of Health and Social Care, NHS England, NHS Improvement and other stakeholders are making in reducing the impact of emergency admissions on acute hospitals. The report takes a whole-system approach, and looks at action across acute, primary, community and social care systems.

Think autism strategy: governance refresh 2018

The Department of Health and Social Care has published an updated strategy which identifies the way that the Department of Health and Social Care and other organisations monitor the progress of the autism. The Autism Act (2009) places a duty on the Secretary of State for Health and Social Care to publish a strategy for meeting the needs of autistic adults in England, and to review it from time to time. The Strategy itself has not changed, but the implementation activities required to deliver its intended outcomes, and who will do what, have been clarified.

Valued care in mental health: improving for excellence

NHS Improvement has published a report which presents a national model to support continuous improvement of services, drawing on the experience and skill in the mental health sector. The report looks at nine mental health trusts in order to create a sustainable model that reflects the challenges and the lessons learned from setbacks, as well as from successful innovations and improvements.

Independent review of the Mental Health Act: interim report

The Department for Health and Social Care has published an interim report which relates to the independent review of the Mental Health Act originally set up to look at how the legislation in the Mental Health Act 1983 is used and how practice can improve. The interim report gives an update on the review's findings and the areas it will look at next.

Forward thinking

The National Institute for Health Research (NIHR) has published a report which provides an overview of recently published NIHR research on the support for people living with severe mental illness. The studies addressed particular uncertainties and evidence gaps identified by those working in and using these services. The report also highlights research currently taking place to inform the support and care of people with severe mental illness.

Housing and health: opportunities for sustainability and transformation partnerships

The King's Fund (supported by the National Housing Federation) has published a report which highlights that housing is one of the core local services that sustainability and transformation partnerships (STPs) and integrated care systems (ICS) need to engage with at a strategic level as they develop population health systems. The report finds that in some areas this is already happening, but it is not happening at the scale and depth needed. In the long term, STPs and ICSs will need to work more closely and constructively with the housing sector to prevent ill health if they are to successfully transform population health.

Childhood obesity

The LGA has published a briefing which was produced to inform a Westminster debate taking place to discuss childhood obesity. The briefing highlights:

- Ensuring that children and young people have the best start in life is a top priority for local leaders in public health as indicated by analysis of a recent study conducted by the LGA. Respondents also suggested the health issues that councils are most concerned with at the present time are mental health and obesity in children.

- Councils take childhood obesity seriously. Today's obese children will be tomorrow's obese adults, and with this comes a range of costly and debilitating major health conditions. To tackle this issue, councils across England have adopted a variety of methods to reduce childhood obesity in their areas.
- Over £1 billion has been spent by local government on tackling child and adult obesity, and physical inactivity since the responsibility of delivering public health transferred to councils in 2015. This is against a backdrop of reductions to the public health budget, councils report a 50% increase in spend between 2013-14 and 2016-17 on childhood obesity, and a 60% increase for childhood physical inactivity in the same period.
- Fundamental reforms are needed to tackle childhood obesity. This includes councils having a say in how and where the soft drinks levy is spent, better labelling on food and drink products, and for councils to be given powers to ban junk food advertising near schools.

The prevention challenge – one year on

Public Health England has published two reports which provide self-assessment reviews of progress by NHS provider trusts in the East Midlands. Public Health professionals in the East Midlands have developed two self-assessment and improvement tools to help NHS provider trusts and CCGs take action against preventable long-term diseases caused by lifestyle choices. Organisations were supported to use the self-assessment tools to measure progress against recommendations made in 'Meeting the prevention challenge in the East Midlands: a call to action'.

The two reports review progress against the recommendations for both NHS provider trusts and CCGs, including self-identified good practice 'strengths' and planned 'next steps'.

Prime Minister sets out 5-year NHS funding plan

The Department for Health and Social Care has announced that the NHS will receive increased funding of £20.5 billion per year by the end of 5 years enabling them to develop a 10-year plan. The plan will be developed by the NHS, working closely with Government and be published later this year. The priorities include:

Getting back on the path to delivering agreed performance standards – locking in and further building on the recent progress made in the safety and quality of care.

Transforming cancer care so that patient outcomes move towards the very best in Europe.

Better access to mental health services, to help achieve the Government's commitment to parity of esteem between mental and physical health.

Better integration of health and social care, so that care does not suffer when patients are moved between systems.

Focusing on the prevention of ill-health, so people live longer, healthier lives.

Learning disability: ‘applying All Our Health’

Public Health England has published evidence and guidance to help healthcare professionals to improve the health and wellbeing of people with learning disabilities. The guidance includes examples to help healthcare professionals assess the needs of people with learning disabilities in their communities and the services available.

Falls: ‘applying All Our Health’

Public Health England has published evidence and guidance for healthcare professionals to assess risks, advise patients and families and prevent falls. The guidance includes:

- Facts about falls.
- Core principles for healthcare professionals.
- Interventions.
- Measuring outcomes.
- Examples of good practice.
- Guidance.

Dementia risk now included as part of NHS Health Check

Public Health England has announced that Healthcare professionals in GP surgeries and the community will soon give advice on dementia risk to patients as part of the NHS Health Check. Adding the dementia element to the NHS Health Check programme will enable healthcare professionals to talk to their patients about how they can reduce their dementia risk, such as by maintaining their social life, keeping mentally and physically active and stopping smoking.

After a diagnosis of dementia: what to expect from health and care services

The Department for Health and Social Care has published a guide to the support people should get from local services in England if they, or someone they know, have been diagnosed with dementia. The document is for anyone diagnosed with dementia and the people who care for them. It has details about what support they should get and includes:

- What is in a care plan.
- How health care and social care services can help.

- Services and systems that work for carers.
- Employment and financial wellbeing.

- Building research and evidence to improve outcomes for carers.
