DERBYSHIRE HEALTH AND WELLBEING BOARD

16 March 2017

Report of the Strategic Director Adult Care and Public Health

HEALTH AND WELLBEING BOARD ROUND-UP REPORT

1. Purpose of the report

To provide the Board with a round-up of key progress in relation to Health and Wellbeing issues and projects not covered elsewhere on the agenda.

2. Round-Up

Childhood obesity plan case studies

These case studies describe the progress being made in partnerships between local authorities and business in improving children's nutrition and reducing obesity. They describe a range of interventions which have helped reduce childhood obesity.

Obesity and the public purse: weighing up the true cost to the taxpayer

This report from the Institute of Economic Affairs analyses the cost of obesity to public services and estimates that the net cost is less than £2.5 billion a year or 0.3 per cent of government spending. The report argues that the economic burden of obesity has been exaggerated and that the health care costs of an ageing population should be the focus for public service efficiency savings.

First-ever plan for public health in Greater Manchester launched

Greater Manchester Health and Social Care Partnership have published a new public health plan which targets all stages of life, puts strong focus on prevention and clearly links better health and wellbeing with work prospects and the economy.

Health matters: combating high blood pressure

This professional resource outlines how providers and commissioners can reduce the average blood pressure of the population through improved prevention, detection and management. The Global Burden of Disease 2015 highlights that high blood pressure is the second biggest known global risk factor for disease after poor diet. In the UK, high blood pressure is the third biggest risk factor for disease after tobacco smoking and poor diet. Over 10 years, an estimated 7,000 quality adjusted life years could be saved, and £120m not spent on related health and social care costs, if England achieved a 15% increase in the proportion of adults who have had their high blood pressure diagnosed.

Preventing falls and fractures

Public Health England has published Falls and fracture consensus statement: supporting commissioning for prevention. The guidance is aimed at local commissioning and strategic leads with a remit for falls, bone health and healthy ageing. This document outlines approaches to interventions and activities helping prevent falls and fractures to improve health outcomes for older people.

The Royal College of Physicians has published Look out! Bedside vision check for falls prevention. This guide aims to help ward staff assess a patient's eyesight in order to help prevent them falling or tripping while in hospital.

Public service commissioning

The Independent Think-Tank Reform has published Faulty by design: the state of public-service commissioning. The focus of this report is to evaluate the success of current approaches to commissioning across various sectors of public services including: health, criminal justice, employment services and beyond. The report reveals that commissioning bodies are not delivering value for money in three key areas: failing to focus on outcomes; fragmented commissioning bodies and devolution of commissioning to local areas is not happening.

Public Health England – Digital by Default Strategy

This strategy document explains how Public Health England (PHE) will make best use of digital opportunities to meet the needs of users, protect and promote health and reduce inequalities. PHE will take a digital-first approach to lead the development of new models of public health. The strategy sets a common approach for digital work including principles, clear roles and responsibilities, and standards for digital development.

Healthy eating in older people

Public Health England has published Helping older people maintain a healthy diet: a review of what works. This review of evidence looks at what works in supporting older people to maintain a healthy diet and reduce the risk of malnutrition. It includes details of promising practice, to see what others are doing and the impact their work is having

National Audit Office report considers progress on health and social care integration

The National Audit Office (NAO) has published a new report regarding the limited progress with integration of health and social care nationally. The report suggests that integration to date has been slower and less successful than envisaged and has not delivered all of the expected benefits for patients, the NHS or local authorities. The report concludes that, the government's plan for integrated health and social care services across England by 2020 is at significant risk. Other key findings from the report also include:

- Nationally, the Better Care Fund (BCF) has not yet achieved its potential and delivered the anticipated savings, reduced hospital activity or improved outcomes for patients.
- The BCF has, however, been successful in incentivising local areas to work together; more than 90% of local areas agreed or strongly agreed that delivery of their plan had improved joint working.
- The NAO express concern that local government has not been fully involved in the design and development of the NHS-led sustainability and transformation plans and ideas around 'place-based' health.
- There are identified barriers to integration, such as misaligned financial incentives, workforce challenges and poor information sharing. These issues are not being systematically addressed nationally.
- NHS England's ambition to save £900 million through introducing seven new care models may be optimistic as the NAO conclude that the new models of care are unproven and their impact is still being evaluated.
- The NAO found no compelling evidence to show that integration leads to sustainable financial savings or reduced acute hospital activity. While there are some good examples of integration at a local level, evaluations have been inhibited by a lack of comparable cost data across different care settings, and difficulty tracking patients through different care settings.

Locality launch 'keep it local' guide to commissioning

Locality have launched a new 'how to keep it local' guide for local commissioners and councillors, which calls for locally-commissioned and delivered public services that provide substantially better outcomes and value than standardised, one-size-fits-all services. The guide busts myths around commissioning locally and showcases the benefits of working with community anchor organisations through a place based approach which promotes social value.

Improving outcomes for children and families

The Local Government Association has published Improving outcomes for children and families in the early years: a key role for health visiting services. This guide highlights the importance of health visitors and commissioners to work together to monitor and evaluate the impact of the health visiting service. The report includes case studies demonstrating examples of innovation.

Understanding Delayed Transfers of Care

The Nuffield Trust has recently published a briefing on the underlying reasons for recent increases in Delayed Transfers of Care (DTOCs). The briefing highlights that whilst there has been an 84% increase in the number of DTOCs attributable to social care since 2010, the majority of DTOCs remain due to delays within the NHS. According to the research, the NHS was responsible for 57% of all DTOCs.

The briefing also highlights there are many patients who are ready for discharge, but not captured within the DTOC statistics, suggesting that the pressure of beds could be worse than the statistics indicate. The Nuffield Trust suggests that a key driver for change must be to reduce the bureaucratic processes associated with hospital discharge. The briefing concludes by suggesting that improvements to data capture and recording revised operational arrangements, an improved interface between the hospital and other local organisations or services and reduced bureaucracy all need to take place in order to reduce DTOCs. However, the analysis warns that developing out of hospital models of care won't necessarily save large amounts of money unless more radical changes take place to the health and social care system.

Care in a post-Brexit Climate

The Institute for Public Policy Research (IPPR) has published a new report that outlines the actions which need to take place to develop the care market nationally and considers the implications of the Brexit vote for the sector. The report suggests three ways to raise standards in social care:

- Skills for Care develop effective minimum standards to push up quality, which are enforced through a stronger Care Quality Commission (CQC).
- Better conditions for workers, which is enforced through a stronger CQC that works in partnership with HM Revenue and Customs.
- An industrial strategy for care is developed with a new focus on innovation and technology to drive productivity improvements.

Delivering Sustainability and Transformation Plans

The King's Fund has published a report which examines the content of the 44 Sustainability and Transformation Plans (STPs) that were submitted in October 2016. STPs are the main vehicle for transforming health and care services in England in line with the NHS Five Year Forward View. The report discusses the main challenges that lie ahead in implementing STPs and realising the opportunities they identify. Key recommendations are also outlined in the paper:

- The proposals in STPs need to be developed into credible plans, with clarity about the most important priorities in each footprint.

- The NHS should engage meaningfully with staff, patients and the public, local authorities and the third sector in discussing the proposals.
- The governance and leadership of STPs needs to be strengthened and more realistic timescales adopted for implementation, given the time it takes for innovations in care to become established and deliver results.
- National bodies should work together to support the NHS and local authorities to implement the plans and send out consistent messages on what they now expect.
- The Government should reiterate its commitment to STPs and support their proposals where the case for change has been made. It should recognise the need for additional resources for the
- NHS and social care if the STPs are to deliver the proposed transformations in care.

House of Commons briefing on Adult Social Care Funding

The briefing on Adult Social care funding (England) examines key funding pressures facing adult social care services and evidence of the impacts of these pressures on social care and health services. It explains the additional funding that the Government has made available and discusses stakeholder concerns about a growing social care 'funding gap' and the need to find a long-term funding solution. It notes that additional funding is not the only answer and issues such as productivity also need to be considered.

Notification of Pharmacy Applications

Under the requirements of the National Health Service (Pharmaceutical and Local Pharmaceutical Services) Regulations 2013 the NHS Commissioning Board must notify the HWB of all relevant applications to provide pharmaceutical services, including the relocation of existing pharmacies. Notification of the following applications has been received:

- Application approved: Change of ownership application for Imaan Pharmacy at Unit 2 Green Lane, Tupton, S42 6BH by Tupton Healthcare Ltd.
