MATLOCK - MATLOCK BATH

WALK 12

DISTANCE 2 MILES

An easy walk alongside the Derwent River with a moderate climb to High Tor grounds with its spectacular views.

From Matlock follow the finger posts towards the town centre. Immediately after crossing the river bridge, take the wide path into Hall Leys Park. Continue through to the end of the park and into Knowlstone Place.

Turn right over the footbridge and right again to follow the path alongside the Derwent. At the end of the path, turn left under the railway bridge and go uphill until the sharp right turn into the entrance of High Tor grounds.

The path now leads gradually uphill towards the summit of High Tor. There are sheer drops close by so please keep children and dogs under close supervision especially at the top where the drops are huge!

For those not wishing to take the highest path, fork off left down the track well before the summit. Follow this as far as an exit gate and then take the waymarked footpath on the right down through the trees to the main exit by the terminus of the cable cars. (This route is shown on the map by a dotted red line).

The more intrepid walker must follow the path uphill to the summit and then downhill to the exit near the cable cars. Either descent passes the "Roman Cave" the result of centuries of lead mining.

Leave the grounds next to the cable car station and follow the path alongside the rail line to the station.

4 scenic station to station walks

Cromford - Matlock Bath & Matlock Bath - Matlock: Walks 9 to 12

1. Matlock

Matlock is overlooked by two dominant buildings, both built by the same person John Smedley. To the north of the town, up Bank Road which once carried a spectacular tramway, lies Smedley's Hydro on which construction began in 1853. Here the Matlock waters were bathed in for health reasons. The building is now the headquarters of Derbyshire County Council.

The impressive form of Riber Castle is silhouetted against the town's south east skyline. This folly was John Smedley's house until he died in 1874, it had a number of uses until after the closure of the zoo became a ruin.

2. St John's Chapel

This unusual building was designed by the architect Sir Guy Dawber, commissioned as a private chapel by the residents of the house known as Rock House standing below.

3. Heights of Abraham

Alpine style cable cars from the Heights of Abraham to Matlock Bath were installed in the early 1980s giving a spectacular ride across the Derwent Gorge. Entry to the show caves beneath the hill is included in the admission price for visitors reaching the top by cable car.

4. Scarthin

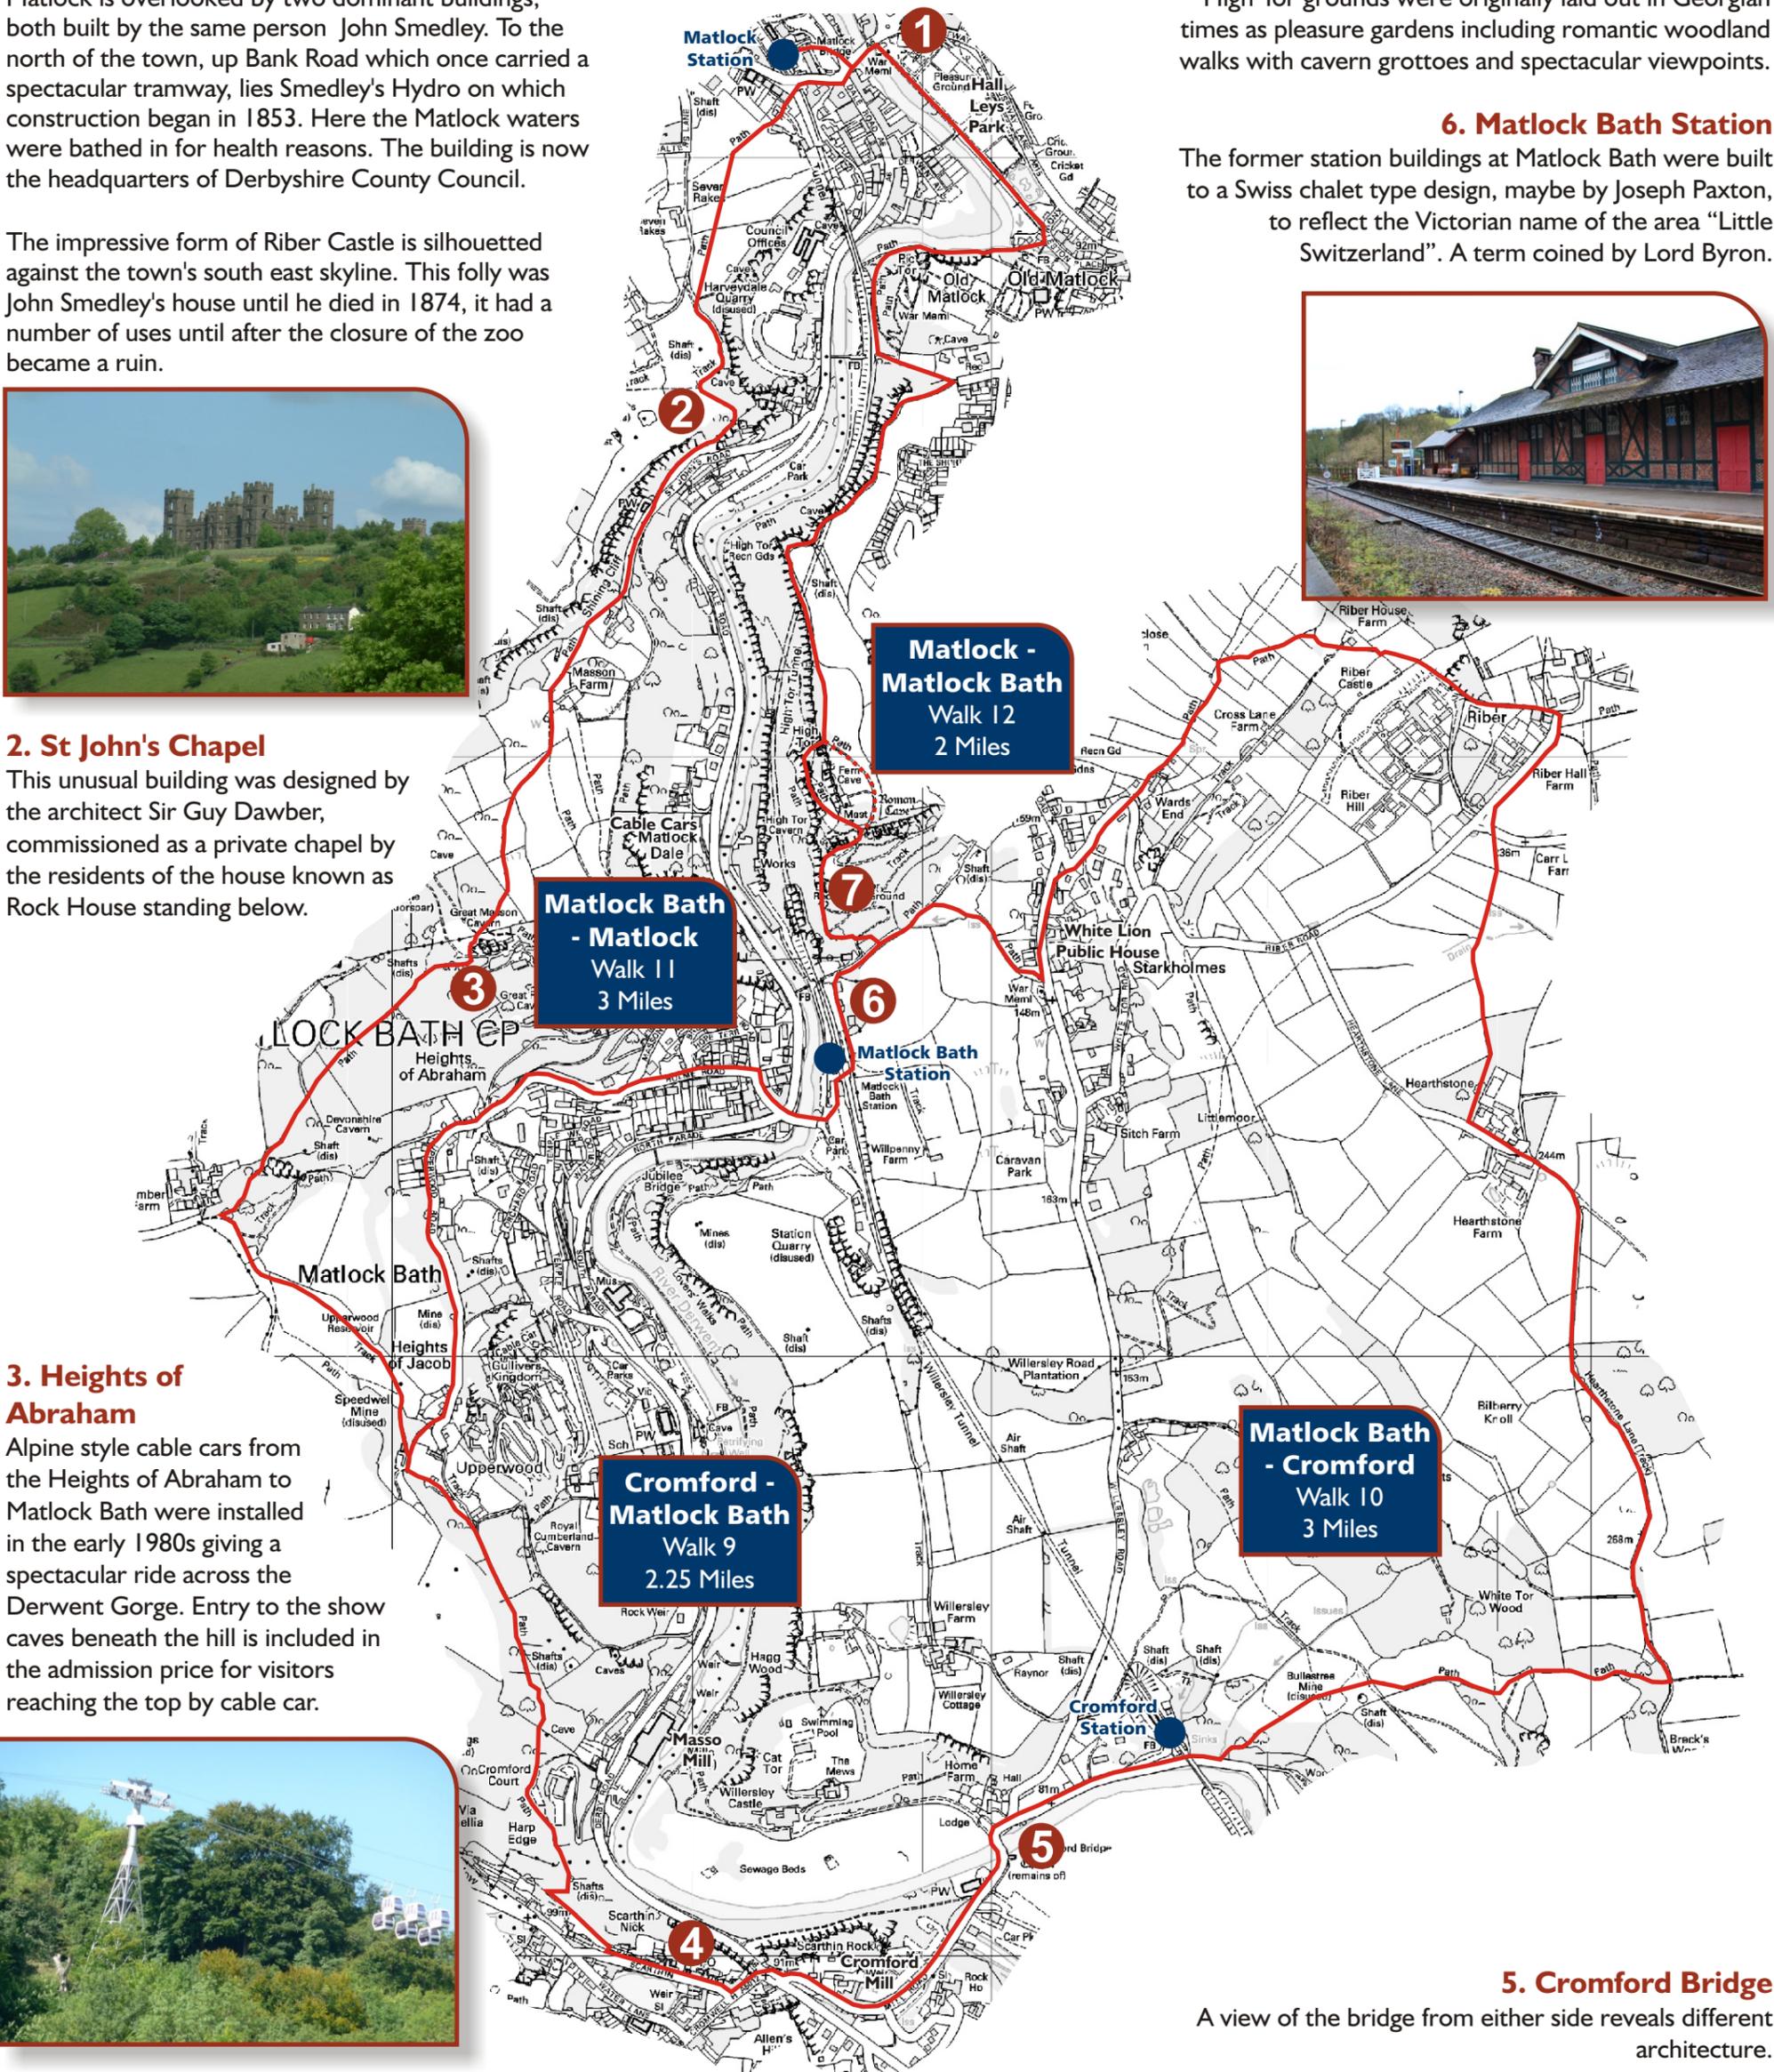

Impressive even today, the Scarthin was once a continuous cliff-face separating Cromford from Matlock Bath. A small gap, to accommodate a road was blasted through in the late 18th century and was made progressively bigger to now accept the A6.

7. High Tor

High Tor grounds were originally laid out in Georgian times as pleasure gardens including romantic woodland walks with cavern grottoes and spectacular viewpoints.

6. Matlock Bath Station

The former station buildings at Matlock Bath were built to a Swiss chalet type design, maybe by Joseph Paxton, to reflect the Victorian name of the area "Little Switzerland". A term coined by Lord Byron.

5. Cromford Bridge

A view of the bridge from either side reveals different architecture.

Built in 1796 and mentioned by Sir Izaak Walton in "The Complete Angler".
