Homelessness

People become and stay homeless for a whole range of reasons and solving homelessness is about much more than putting a roof over people's heads. People often face a number of issues in addition to, but often compounded by, their homelessness. The isolation and destructive nature of homelessness means that people find it difficult to access the help they need.

Local authorities do not have to provide housing for all homeless people. Instead, they have a duty to house 'priority' homeless people and, every year, tens of thousands of people apply to their local authority for assistance.

If you're homeless or threatened with homelessness, you must always in the first instance, contact your local district or borough council.

You're in priority need if:

- You or someone you live with is pregnant
- 'Dependent children' live with you (under 16s or under 19s if they're studying full-time)
- You're 'vulnerable', eg as a result of old age or disability
- You're homeless after a flood, fire or other disaster.

Key advice

- Get in touch with your local borough or district council as soon as you can
- You can apply to your council for help up to 28 days before becoming homeless, you don't have to wait.

Who can get help

You don't have to be sleeping on the street to get help from your local council.

The council might have to help you if you:

- Are likely to be evicted within the next 28 days
- Can only stay where you are temporarily (for example, if you are staying with friends or family in an emergency)
- Have to move because of violence or threats
- Are living in overcrowded conditions
- You are homeless after leaving hospital, prison or the armed forces
- Live in a caravan or houseboat but have nowhere to put it
- Are squatting or don't have permission to stay where you are.

The council may also be able to help you if your home is in such a bad state of repair that it is damaging your health or if your household is forced to live apart because your accommodation isn't suitable for you all to live together.

Even if the council has refused to help you in the past, you can still apply as homeless. Your circumstances and needs may have changed since you last applied.

How to get help on the streets

- Find a safe place to stay as soon as you can
- Local drop in centres have food and help, and can direct you to support services (see sources of help below).
